Lincoln's Distribution Index recorded a loss of 7.4% in Q2 2017 vs. Q1 2017; Aerospace and Defense (+8.5%), Healthcare (+5.4%), Technology (+3.9%), Building Products (+0.5%), and Consumer Products (-5.1%) outpaced the index, while Communications, Electronics and Electrical (-9.1%), Industrial (-11.0%), and Automotive and Truck (-17.7%) lagged behind the index

2017 State of M&A in Distribution: Never Been a Better Time to Sell

Each year, Modern Distribution Management publishes its State of the Market report, highlighting industry trends, current conditions and an outlook for the distribution M&A market. This year's article highlighted that although the M&A market has leveled off a bit since 2015, there is still strong demand from buyers. Providing his perspective on the M&A market, Brad Keyworth, Lincoln's Head of Distribution, commented that even with the current economic expansion, organic growth is still slow enough that companies continue to seek assets to boost their top lines. "The publicly traded companies are not generating the organic growth to justify the stock prices that they're trading at," he says. "They have a need to go out into the market and complement their organic growth via acquisition."
